

ABSTRACT

5 A rotary cutting tool includes a cutting part having helical grooves formed in an outer periphery thereof. Each groove forms a helix angle relative to the axis of rotation which gradually transforms into a smaller cutting face angle at a front end of the cutting action.